Compliance remains the fastest-growing area in the financial services industry. The increase in federal laws and regulations governing financial institutions and the focus of enforcement placed on the compliance efforts of financial companies creates opportunities for attorneys with demonstrated expertise in financial law and compliance. Seton Hall Law School now provides training beyond the J.D. degree to select students, practitioners and scholars in the growing and increasingly complex area of financial services compliance. Interested students may pursue an entirely online LL.M. degree option, or choose to come to campus for in-person instruction.

Admission

A candidate seeking admission to the LLM program must have a J.D. degree from a law school that is approved by the Section of Legal Education of the American Bar Association or the foreign equivalent from a school of law. As Seton Hall Law School admits highly qualified candidates, the program is very competitive. The Admissions Committee considers practice experience, graduate degrees in the financial field, quality of law school academic record, demonstrated interest in compliance, and evidenced ability to excel in academic pursuits. The application process is rolling and applications for admission are accepted at any time.

Academic Standing

LLM students must remain in good academic standing throughout the program. View the full academic policy. (<https://law.shu.edu/Students/msj-students/academics.cfm>)

Exam Procedures

Each student is given an exam number. In addition to using his or her exam number, each student should indicate on the front of his/her exam that he/she is an LLM candidate. This allows professors to exclude graduate students from the mandatory J.D. grading curve. No other reference to identity should be indicated on the exam. Every effort to maintain a student's anonymity will be made; however, anonymity may sometimes be compromised due to the small number of graduate students enrolled in a given class.
