

GLOBAL SUPPLY CHAIN MANAGEMENT MAJOR

The COVID pandemic was responsible for widespread disruption of national and global supply chains, due to changing demand for products, labor shortages, and other factors. In addition, worldwide political conflicts have further complicated freight, cargo, and transport logistics. The need for an undergraduate major in supply chain management has never been greater. The program in global supply chain management emphasizes the connection to business and the curriculum introduces a focus on the global aspect of supply chain management. In addition, the curriculum embeds written and oral communication, presentation skills, and critical thinking in many of the courses.
